

PARENT BRIEF

High-Quality Instructional Materials (HQIM)

Stronger Classroom Resources for Your Child

Every child in South Carolina deserves access to grade-level learning that prepares them for long-term success.

With funding from the General Assembly, the South Carolina Department of Education is supporting schools with High-Quality Instructional Materials (HQIM). These materials are aligned to South Carolina's academic standards and are designed to help students build knowledge step by step.

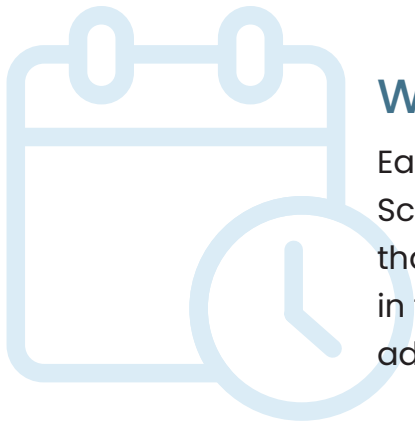

By using consistent, standards-aligned materials across classrooms, HQIM helps ensure students receive strong instruction no matter where they live. It also makes it easier for families to follow along with what their child is learning and provide support at home.

What Does HQIM Mean for Your Child?

- Provides consistent, grade-level learning aligned to South Carolina standards.
- Helps students build understanding step by step.
- Creates more consistent learning experiences across classrooms and schools.
- Makes it easier for families to follow along and support learning at home.

When will this happen?

Each school district will introduce HQIM on its own timeline. Schools are planning carefully to ensure a smooth transition that supports students and teachers. The SCDE has invested in technology to give students and families 24/7 access to adopted textbooks.

Learn More About HQIM

SCDE is committed to keeping families informed. Scan the QR code for updates, resources, and answers to common questions.

